GEN. EPPA HUNTON has been appointed a United States Senator from Virginia, vice Barbour, deceased.

FROM present indications it looks as if after Tuesday next, there will be nothing left of Harrison but his hat.

EX-PRESIDENT JAMES K. POLK'S will was declared null and void by Chancellor Allison at Nashville, Tenn., last week, and the estate given to the heirs at law. It is probably worth $300,000.

HENRY C. PAYNE, a member of the Republican national committee for Wisconsion, declares that if Harrison is renominated he will lose both Wisconsin and Illinois, as against Cleveland, on the school question.

WHEN the suit of Esther Jacobs against Henry B. Sikes, for $50,000 damages for breach of promise was called in court at New York last week, Michael Moran, one of the jurors, dropped in the corridor and died in five minutes.

AT least eight European governments have accepted the President's invitation to anrticipate in a monetary conference, and there is no longer any doubt of such a meeting. The President will communicate with Congress on the subject in a few days and will probably transmit the correspondence.

THE state secretary has estimated from statistics at his command that last year's crops of wheat, corn, oats, hay and potatoes were worth $78,000,000 to the farmers of Pennsylvania. That is a good showing, and by the very force of contrast brings up the pitiful picture of famine stricken Russia.

THE Treasury department is almost frantically calling upon its revenue agents to hurry up the collection of the taxes before the close of the fiscal year, so that a deficit, right in the midst of the Presidential campaign, may not appear as a frightful illustration of the effects of a Billion Dollar legislation.

THE acquittal of John C. Newton, the millionnaire president of the Des Moines and Kansas City railroad on Thursday of last week in the Federal court, at Des Moines, Iowa, of the charge of having padded the mails carried by his line, was followed by a banquet in the evening at the Savery given to the jurors in the case by the defendant. The next morning Judge Woolston severely reprimanded the jurors, Mr. Newton and his lawyer.

A SOCIETY has been formed in London under the title of the Witnesses' Protection society. The objects of this association are to protect witnesses from insult by counsel, to put the matter of contempt of court into the hands of a jury, and to raise a fund to indemnify contumacious witnesses from pecuniary loss, provided always that the questions they refuse to answer reflect upon their honor, and are at the same time irrevelant to the issues of the case.

THERE is a tariff duty of about 400 per cent. on imported pearl buttons, but the girls who are employed in the pearl button factory in Detroit have been obliged to strike against a reduction of wages. It would appear that an absolutely prohibitive tariff rate is not sufficiently persuasive to induce the maintenance of a moderate wage rate. In the light of such facts the laborer can see without eyes the hollowness of the pretense that high duties are a guarantee of high wages.

MUCH valuable territory in the West has been located by settlers through the means of scrip issued to Indians in payment for their lands, and afterward assigned to other parties. Secretary Noble of the Interior Department, now holds that such assignments of scrip are invalid and the ownership of sections of the public lands located by means of assigned scrip is consequently open to question. In the first case of this sort brought to Secretary Noble's notice relating to lands in Minnesota formerly owned by Chippewa Indians, the contestant will obtain possession if he can prove the regularity of his application.

THE Michigan road law, providing that the users of wide wagon wheel tires shall have a rebate of one-half of their road tax, is an ingenious inducement which works great advantage to the taxpayer, to the roads, and, by consequence to the general public. According to a writer on good roads, "it is estimated that with broad tires on wagons, carriages and buggies all public highways can be kept in very much better condition than is now possible, at one-fourth the cost of the present system. In the matter of road reform the first essential seems to be the widening of the tires of the vehicles. The general adoption of this would be a long step of itself in the direction of perfect roads. Without it perfect roads are practically impossible."

Unless some unusual political circumstances, says the Harrisburg Patriot, not now visible nor foreseen appears between this and the meeting of the national Republican convention at Minneapolis next week, James G. Blaine will be the nominee of the Republican party for President. That he will be chosen from spite-work rather than through personal popularity or from any party or patriotic necessity we are aware, but the coming convention is so made up that what Mr. Harrison called "personal disappointments" will control it.

But Mr. Blaine nominated, what then? How is he to be elected? What better, stronger claims has he upon his party now than he had when eight years ago the people of the United States by popular vote and electoral vote declared against him? Is his record any clearer, has he displayed any new qualities of statesmanship, has he erased the ugly record of his Congressional speculations and investments, has he divested his politics of the commercial side? To all these questions a negative response must be made. The Blaine of 1884 is the Blaine of 1888—except as to health.

And what as to health? The fact cannot be disguised that Mr. Blaine is a man afflicted with a chronic and incurable disease. His age makes any improvement of his health only temporary. It is not in nature for him to withstand the burdens and cares of a four year's term should he make a doubtful escape from the trials and excitement of the preceding political campaign. Nobody knows these facts better than each one of the men who forced him into this canvass. Why then do they want to nominate him?

To beat Mr. Harrison, punish the President is the sole purpose. No higher motive controls. They are satisfied to throw Mr. Harrison out of the White House, for certain. That done the election of Mr. Blaine is a secondary matter. The first victory gained the second one can be fought for. But the nomination of Mr. Blaine, unsound physically and uncertain mentally, is now to be accomplished.

And after the nomination? Death or defeat, or both.

THE Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republic in speaking of the dissensions between the rival factions of the Republican party that have been stirred up within the past ten days on the presidential question, quotes a Republican Senator as saying:

Blaine is a——trickster and a liar. If he is encouraging the idea of nominating him for president, I say it unequivocally that he lied to the President, and that he has lied to nearly all the members of the cabinet and to many Republicans in the Senate and House of Representatives who have talked to him during the past year. I think his conduct, if he is seriously thinking of taking the nomination, dishonorable in the extreme. He ought to have withdrawn from the cabinet the moment he even contemplated being disloyal to the President's fortunes, and if I were in President Harrison's place, notwithstanding Blaine's greatness and his popularity, I would flip him as quick as a wink and put some honorable man on whom I could rely at the head of the state department.

WHY should not the Way and Means committee, says the New York World, report at once a bill to put all sugar on the free list?

Sugar is an article of universal use. Its price touches every citizen directly. We have made raw sugar free for the benefit of the refiners, and for their further benefit we impose a practically prohibitory duty on refined sugar. The sugar refiners have formed a trust in order to take to themselves the whole of a duty which they do not need for protection or to enable them to control our market.

Why should the people who are called upon to pay a bounty of two cents a pound for all domestic sugar produced be required also to pay a tribute of half a cent a pound to the sugar trust for all the sugar they consume?

A bill for free sugar could be drawn in ten minutes, reported in ten minutes more and passed out of hand. Why should it not be done? Is any measure of popular relief more urgent or more manifestly just?

BLAINE and Harrison are now playing "hide and seek." Blaine skipped off to New York last week and while there Harrison's enemies took the occasion to expand Blaine' presidential boom to its utmost tension. Blaine tarried in New York until Harrison started for Rochester where the president was billed for Memorial Day, when the wiley Secretary returned to Washington. The belief prevails that when these two particular stars meet there will be a lively row, ending with the Secretary's retirement from the Cabinet, but every effort will be made to keep them apart until after the meeting of the Minneapolis convention. President Harrison's friends are now loud and open in their denunciations of Blaine,s tricky ways in playing into the hand of the President's enemies while occupying a seat at his official table, but Blaine and his friends have no consciencious scruples, and if Harrison can be downed, they are in no way particular about the means employed.

THE Pennsylvania state Senate is now made up of 29 Republicans and 20 Democrats, there being a vacancy in a Republican district. The odd-numbered Senators retire this year, causing 20 of the 29 Republican seats to be vacant and only making four Democratic seats vacant. In other words the Democrats will have 16 hold-overs and the Republicans but nine.

HOWLAND F. SMITH, of New Bedford, Mass., on Monday broke the world's bycicle record for twenty-five miles. He made the distance in 2 hours, 17 minutes, 45 seconds, breaking his own record of 2: 19: 13.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 28, 1892. Presidential politics were lugged into the House this week by the Harrison and anti-Harrison Republicans. Representative Henderson, of Iowa, made a bunkum speech criticising Mr. Harrison for not having given the negroes representation on the board of managers of the World's Fair, which was replied to by Representative Johnson, of Indiana, who is known to be very close to Mr. Harrison. Mr. Johnson created some excitement by letting the cat out of the bag concerning the infamous Force bill which Mr. Harrison is still intent upon having enacted into a law, if his party can secure control of the House and elect the President again. Mr. Johnson indulged in the stock abuse of Democrats in the South for their treatment of the poor negro, which Mr. Harrison doubtless hopes will have a good effect upon the negro delegates to the Minneapolis convention. Democrats were delighted at this open avowal of a close and confidential friend of Mr. Harrison's that the Force bill is not dead, but only sleeping—it will be worth thousands of votes to Democratic candidates for the House, as well as to the electoral ticket.

Since the arrival of Commander-in-Chief John C. New, early this week, the Harrison army has dropped its meek, by-leave-of-Mr.-Blaine air, and from this time on it will fight for Mr. Harrison's nomintation. The anti's also, under command of Boss Clarkson, have their fighting blood up, and the wounds left by the battle royal that is to be fought at Minneapolis will make it all the easier to elect the ticket nominated at Chicago. Mr. Cleveland's friends are anxious for the Republicans to nominate Blaine, as they believe his nomination will remove all doubt as to the nomination of Mr. Cleveland at Chicago, and they are confident that he could beat Blaine worse than he did in 1884.

The action of the Democratic caucus in deciding to push the regular appropriation bills, in the House, ahead of everything else, and to secure an adjournment at the earliest possible date, was disappointing to many members interested in legislation which they had hoped to have disposed of at this session, but the very large majority by which the caucus adopted it demonstrated that it was deemed the proper action to take. There can be no doubt that the sooner the House can pass all of the necessary appropriation bills and demonstrate to the country that it is ready for an adjournment, the better it will be for the Democratic party.

The refusal of Secretary Rusk to ask Congress for an appropriation to be spent by the alleged rain-maker, Dyrenforth, had no effect upon that cheeky and slick-tongued individual. He has talked with such good purpose to the Senate committee on agriculture that Senator Pettigrew offered an amendment to the agricultural bill appropriating $40,000 for rain-making experiments. That is just $15,000 more than Dyrenforth asked for, and he is correspondingly happy; but his jubilation will be short, as the House will not allow this money to be thus thrown down a rat-hole, so to speak, whatever the Senate may do.

"Teddy" Roosevelt is again after Mr. Wanamaker, whose testimony relating to the violations of the civil service law by the employees of the Baltimore post-office contains "slanderous falsehoods." This is the second time that Teddy has publicly accused the Postmaster General of carelessly handling the truth.

Senator Morgan is encouraged by the vote—28 to 17—by which the Senate defeated Mr. Morrill's motion to refer his resolution, directing the committee on finance to make an examination and report in relation to currency and coinage, and as to the effect of the act of July, 1890, on which the price of silver bullion, to that committee, to hope that the Senate will adopt the resolution. Senator Sherman says that to adopt the resolution would be to instruct the finance committee to report a free coinage bill. Only three Democratic Senators—Gray, Palmer and Vilas—voted for Mr. Morrill's motion, the adoption of which would be considered equivalent to defeating Mr. Morgan's resolution. Senator Hill was present, but he did not vote.

The National Silver Convention is in session here. Among the several hundred delegates from nearly all the states are a number of People's party men and Knights of Labor. The convention hopes to succeed in getting some silver legislation from Congress.

Secretary Noble has scored another failure in his attempt to get Mr. Harrison to get rid of Commissioner Raum before the investigating committee makes its report recommending his removal. Mr. Harrison is said to have told him that he feared the effect on the soldier vote of removing Raum or allowing him to resign and providing for him elsewhere, and had made up his mind to stand by him until after the election.

The River and Harbor Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The friends of the river and harbor bill are becoming somewhat anxious as to its ultimate fate. At present it stands upon the calendar with the Senate amendments pending. Should it again—as according to the rules it must do—run the gauntlet of the committee of the whole, the time of its final passage would be wholly problematical, as every amendment would be subject to further amendment and its enemies could take advantage of the present depleted condition of the House to postpone its passage indefinitely. Confronted with this condition the advocates of the measure have decided to ask the House to suspend the rules on Monday next, in order to non-concur in the Senate amendments and to agree to a conference.

Burying for Six Days.

LONDON, June 1.—Further mail advices from Mauritius says that the morning after the hurricane every street in Port Louis was filled with debris. The courses of the storm was erratic. Massive houses were overthrown while frail houses near them were not injured in any way. The burial of the 600 persons killed in Port Louis alone accupied six days.

Out of the sixty two churches and chapels in Port Louis fifty were ruined. The remaining twelve were badly damaged. Boats were stranded during the hurricane at places 500 feet from the sea.

Tornado in England.

LONDON, June 1.—A most terrific tornodo passed over Blakney, in Gloucestershire, yesterday. The wind was accompanied by heavy thunder and light ning and a remarkable downpour of rain. The streets were flooded in an instant and rushing torrents of water swept through them, carrying off everything that would float. The roofs of houses were blown off and the torrents of rain destroyed almost everything in them.

AMONG the prominent Pittsburgers who have recently come out strongly for Cleveland is George A. McBeth, the glass manufacturer, who left the Republican party on account of its high-tariff policy. Mr. McBeth says he will vote for Cleveland against any other man in the United States.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Republican Ingratitude.

President Harrison has good reason to feel aggrieved at the attempt of the most active leaders of his party to deprive him of the practical indorsement of a renomination.

Mr. Harrison is a typical Republican and has made a representative Republican administration. Even his faults are those of his party. If he is egotistical and self-sufficient, does he not type the towering conceit of the Republican party that it alone has the governing capacity, and that it contains all of the virtue and most of the patroiism of the country? If he is bigoted in his partisanship, preferring, with Speaker Reed a bad Republican to a good Democrat, is not that the prevailing sentiment in his party? If he thinks Republican success so great an end as to justify any means to win it, has not that been the Republican creed since the stealing of the Presidency in 1876? If he has treated the public office as party spoils, is not that what his party has demanded of him? If he has protected its rascals and rewarded its corruptionists, has not Republican sentiment supported him?

President Harrison has been true to every principle, precedent and practice of his party. He has done exactly what was asked and expected of him——except, as he well says, that there was not enough offices to go around. Every state convention has endorsed and applauded him, but yet there is a widespread and determined effort to cast him off.

If republics are ungrateful what shall be said of Republicans?—N. Y. World.

In a Secret Grave.

GREENSBURG, May 30.—A riot occured at Calumet last night, in which a man named Shusick was shot and killed. As usual with the Hungarian miners there on the eve of a holiday, they had on hand an unlimited quantity of beer. John Lijons, a boardinghouse keeper, had a "beer party." A free fight started and Lijons pulled a revolver upon Shusick, who fell to the floor pierced by two bullets. He was carried away and died some time after.

The Hungarians, to hide the crime, buried him secretly in a thicket graveyard near by. The mining Hungarians have burying grounds of their own. Many a victim of a midnight brawl has found a quiet resting place in the thicket chosen by these foreigners, and no one has been the wiser. In this instance the sound of the brawl aroused the neighborhood. Shusick was missed from the table this morning, and a quiet inquiry was set on foot. Officials visited the retired Hungarian graveyard and found a newly made grave. This was opened, and the body of Shusick was found with two bullet holes in his breast. Detectives at once started in search of the murderer, Lijons, who has not yet been found. Jealousy is supposed to be at the bottom of the crime.

Attacked by Porcupines.

LOCK HAVEN, May 29.—Two young men from the city had a thrilling experience in the wilds of McKean county, last night, where they were peeling bark. The men occupied a deserted woodchoppers' camp and when night came their troubles commenced.

Porcupines seemed to come from every bush pile. They climed all over the camp, chewing the boards and made so much noise that it was impossible to sleep. The men would have driven them off, but no sooner would they lie down to sleep than the quill pigs appeared again. The boys concluded to kill them off. One of the hunters seized an axe, and while the other held the torch he made a dash at the porkies. The latter were now ready for fight. They gathered around the men snapping like vicious dogs.

Then followed a lively time for a few minutes, when the porkies fled defeated and the victor came marching in with his axe on his shoulder. He was slightly bitten and had a few quills in his legs. This morning there were eight dead porcupines lying on the scene of the conflict. Up to this time they have killed twenty-nine porcupines and the end is not yet.

Saved by a Peasant.

VIENNA, May 30.—The spectacle of Russian troops marching in hostile array against the Austrian forces was witnessed yesterday at the Galician frontier, near Radzivilon. The Austrian garrison of Brody was out maneuvering. Brody is only a few miles from the Russian-Polish frontier, and in the course of tramping about the Austrian troops unwittingly crossed the frontier, into Russian territory.

The Russian cammandor marshaled his men and started out after the Austrians. Had he overtaken them, a sanguinary encounter would probably have been the result.

Fortunately for peace, the Austrian commander had his attention called by a Polish peasant to the fact that he was on Russian territory. The Austrians turned their faces at once toward the frontier, and before the Russians got within firing distance the Austrians were on their own side of the line. The affair is regarded in Vienna as of considerable significance as showing the readiness of the Russians to seize any pretext for hostilities.

Killed by Electricity.

PITTSBURG, May 28.—A sensational accident occurred at the Edgar Thomson Steel works at Braddock, about 5 o'clock this morning, by which two men were killed and several others rendered unconscious by a shock from the electric light wire in the blacksmith shop.

At the time mentioned a number of men were working on a traveling crane in the blacksmith shop. The boom came in contact with the electric light wire and cut through the insulation.

In an instant the full force of the current was conducted among the iron framework of the crane, and all the men in contact were knocked insensible.

All but three of the men soon recovered, but the others were carried outside the shop and restoratives promptly administered.

Two died in a few moments after they had been removed. Their names were: Anthony Lokel, twenty-four years, residing at Knoxville; Joseph Zoleny, aged twenty-three, unmarried, of Knoxville.

The name of the third man, who is still unconscious, has not yet been ascertained.

—Charles F. Cross, of Ashland, Va., while plowing found a jar containing $633 in gold and silver. It was buried by M. E. Cox, now deceased, in 1855. He was afterward unable to locate the burial place.

—This globe has had 60,627,852,237,675,206 human inhabitants since the beginning of time. To even bury this vast number the whole landed surface of the globe, every inch of it, would have to be dug over 129 times!

—The gray rat came to Europe from India by way of Russia, and is now popularly known as the Norway rat, from a mistaken tradition that it came from Norway to England and from the latter country to America.

—A priest at Shamokin, refused to marry Anna Micha and Joseph Diech because they were cousins. The prospective bride then proposed to Diech to get a Protestant minister. He refused and she has now brought suit against him for breach of promise.

—Since May 7th there have been 2,450 deaths from cholera at Serinagur, in the Vale of Cashmere. All the Europeans in the place became alarmed some time ago at the fearful ravages of the disease, and left the city. There is now not a European in Serinagur.

—A reign of terror exists in Venezuela. Palacio and his soldiers are running things with a high hand, raiding houses, pillaging towns, and marching prisoners in chains through the streets. A number of buildings have been blown up and many people killed.

—Rudolph Shaffer, a prominent building contractor of Huntingdon, after discussing the prevalence of suicide with a party of friends at the Leister house, went into the basement of the building and shot himself with a revolver in the forehead, killing himself instantly.

The child choked to death on Sunday night after intense suffering.

—The investigation as to the cause of the death of Gamble Wier, late Superintendent of Police in Pittsburg, which started with such great promise of highly sensational developments, has been dropped and the much-talked-of report of Chemist Blanck will never be made public. It is asserted by some that the friends of the deceased have reached the conclusion that the presence of arsenic in the stomach was due to the embalming fluid.

—At the 1876 Centennial at Philadelphia, an electric light was exhibited as a curiosity, and now nearly all of the cities of the United States are so lighted, and Mr. Edison has given the world the incandescent light for the interior of our dwellings and buildings. The storage battery is now being so perfected that it is reasonable to prophesy its being employed to convey passenger cars over common railroad tracks, and even to be used in the place of the steam engine for freight trains.

—On Friday afternoon, at Clifford, Bartholomew County, Indiana, Maggie Burns went to the residence of Maville Tolen, a young and prosperous farmer, who has called upon her frequently within the last year, and, in the presence of his parents, asked him if he intended to carry out his promise and marry her. Young Tolen, who is much younger than her, replied "No, you are too old." At this she pulled from a pocket a revolver and began firing at him. Five shots were fired. One went through his cheek and the fifth struck him in the neck, inflicting a wound which may prove fatal. Mrs. Burns escaped.

She has not even been able to talk one word and the attiending physicians have few hopes of her recovery.

—Judge Barker has sold his residence on Horner street to Mr. Joseph Davis, of Cambria township, possession to be given on the 1st of April next. It is the intention of Judge Barker to build a residence on a lot purchased by him from the Griffith's estate, formerly occupied by the old skating rink, opposite the Court House, on the corner of Center and Lloyd streets.

—Adams county will pay one thousand dollars to the widow of Mr. Black, who was killed a year ago by breaking through a bridge. All bridges known to be unsafe should be reported promptly to the commissioners or supervisors of townships, as the case may require. No matter what expense there may be in repairing them, they ought to be kept perfectly safe if it is possible to do so.

—Mr. James D. Lucas, of this place, and Miss Lucy Belle, daughter of Dr. John Thompson, of Corsica, Pa., were married at the latter place on Wednesday, June 1st 1892. Mr. Lucas is one of Ebensburg's prosperous and enterprising business men and in company with his many friends we unite in wishing that he and his bride may have a long, happy and prosperous career in their matrimonial life.

—On last Friday morning when the crew and passengers on the train that left Ebensburg at 7:45 A. M., reached Kaylor's, they found the track a short distance ahead blockaded by a lot of dirt thrown on the track by a blast put off by workmen employed in constructing the new road. He is about twelve years of age and the son of a widow who lives just outside the Twelfth-Ward limit of the city.—Johnstown Tribune.

—In the column of political announcements will be found the card of Hon. Jas. J. Thomas, of Carroll township, as a candidate for Assembly. Mr. Thomas is a well-known citizen who stands high in the estimation of his fellow Democrats throughout the county, and who represented this county in the legislature with signal ability and and with credit to those who sent him a number of years ago. Should he be renominated, his election will certainly follow, and the county will have an honest, able and faithful legislator.

—In the column containing the political announcements will be found the card of Jas. G. Hasson, editor of this paper, withdrawing from the canvass as a candidate for the office of Assembly. We certainly feel grateful to our friends, who, during our short experience as a candidate, have been generous in their assurances of support, but believing that the interests of the Democratic party in this county will be better served by our withdrawal, we step down and out, knowing full well that in any of the four candidates left on the ticket for that office, the Democracy will find fit and able representatives.

—At the camp fire held at the Opera House on Monday night the sum of $885 was subscribed for the purpose of building a soldiers' monument. As nearly $200 had been raised on a former occasion the sum now reaches about $800.

—At Wilmore on Wednesday of last week, while a boy was leading a horse belonging to Mr. Conrad Wentroth, of that place, to pasture, the animal broke loose and ran away. After running a short distance, the horse stepped on the halter strap, which threw him and broke his neck, the animal dying a few minutes after falling.

—Alternate wires of copper and zinc are run around the trunk of a tree, at a distance of half an inch apart. The casual catterpillar begins to mount the trunk of a tree and unlimbers himself with the confidence and vigor born of an impending feast. Presently he reaches the copper wire, pokes his nose over it, and lets another link out of his backbone. Half an inch further up his front feet strike the zinc, the circuit is completed, and the unfortunate larva is a martyr to science.

—The finest choir in the world is at St. Peter's cathedral in Rome. There is not a female voice in it, and yet the most difficult oratories and sacred music are rendered in such a manner as to make one think that Adelina Patti's high soprano is leading. The choir is composed of sixty boys. They are trained in the work from the time they get control of their vocal chords, and some of the best singers are not over nine years old. At the age of seventeen they are dropped from the choir.

—The jury on the trial of Florence Fuhrer for the killing of Michael F. Niland on a locomotive in Somerset county on the 1st of March last, after being out six hours on Friday last returned a verdict of manslaughter. On the first ballot the jury stood two for conviction of murder in the first degree, four for murder in the second degree, four for manslaughter, and two for acquittal. The defendant and his counsel are delighted with the verdict, and the general opinion is that it is a righteous one. The maximum penalty is twelve years in the penitentiary.

—On Wednesday evening, June 15th, Hon. Judge Dean will deliver a lecture at the Frugality opera house for the benefit of the Catholic churgh at Frugality. The admission is 25 cents. Judge Dean needs no introduction to any audience in this part of the state. For the convenience of those who would like to attend from points along the the Coalport and Cresson railroad, a special train will run from Coalport to Frugality, arriving at Frugality about 7:30 o'clock, and after the lecture the train will run through to Cresson and return to Coalport, and for Altoona patrons fast line will stop at Cresson.

—On Monday the old soldiers were loaded with war stories intended to be fired off at the camp-fire. Some of them, however, could not be held in check until night, and in the after-noon several war-scarred G) vet-erans, in arguing their respective merits, took occasion to controvert their comrades' statements. The certificates of character for bravery they gave each other led the small boys ranged around to wonder if it could be possible that some of these brave men of to-day could have just lagged a little behind in the mad rush made to the defense of their country in 1861. It is possible the uniform of the G. A. R. cannot be accepted as a positive certificate for bravery and patriotism in every instance.

Decoration Day.

Decoration Day in Ebensburg, contrary to its usual custom, was ushered in with fine weather, which continued throughout the day. A great throng of people from the country was in town and the turn-out was larger than that of any previous year. Promptly at the time appointed the different organizations formed into line in front of the Opera House, and together with a great number of spectators, assembled to hear the address of Rev. R. C. Morgan, who was to deliver the oration from a platform built for that purpose. The committee of arrangements, however, had decided otherwise, and the address was delivered in the Opera House, much to the regret of a large number of people who were unable to get into the crowded room. The address was an eloquent one and the Reverend Morgan sustained his reputation of being a speaker of more than ordinary ability.

At the conclusion of the address the different cemeteries were visited in accordance with the program published last week.

His Money and Notes Taken

On Saturday, May 21, the house of Mr. Elias Yoder, a bachelor, living alone, near Foust's saw mill, in Conemaugh township, this county, was broken into and ransacked, and $50 in silver and $1,100 in notes taken. Mr. Yoder had left his house early in the morning, going to Tobias Keifer's, in Upper Yoder township, Cambria county, where he spent the day. When he returned home in the evening he found the door broken open, everything in the house turned upside down. The house stands in a desolate place and has been occupied by Mr. Yoder for years. Some years ago Mr. Yoder's sister—Mrs. Heckman—who lives in the same neighborhood, was relieved of $200 in about the same manner as above described. She also lived alone. No clue was ever obtained to the burglars at that time, and there is no clue to those who robbed her brother.—Somerset Democrat.

Johnstown's Memorial Monument.

The people of Johnstown and the Conemaugh valley, on Tuesday, the anniversary of the great flood, dedicated a memorial monument to the unknown dead buried in Grand view Cemetery. There are 750 unidentified, resting in that beautiful city of the dead and it was a fitting tribute that a monument should tell the tale and point the spot to visitors in the future. The Johnstown Tribune thus describes the monument:

The monument is built of Barre Vermont granite, the lower base being in size twelve feet by eight feet, resting on a solid concrete foundation. On this base rests a second and a third base and a plinth, on which is set an inscription block, surmounted at each corner with a heavy triple-polished corner, the inscription being:

TO THE
LOST BY THE FLOOD OF
MAY 31, 1889.

On this is set a plinth, handsomely carved in front, and on which rests the cap, which extends over the inscription block, and is carved in graceful mouldings. To this is added another plinth, on which rest two sitting figures, representing Faith and Charity. In the center of the plinth is set a pedestal nearly four feet in height, on which stands a figure six feet in height and which surmounts the whole, representing Hope. These figures are carved from white Western Rhode Island granite.

The entire monument has a height of twenty-one feet eight inches, a weight of thirty-five tons and is a beautiful specimen of sepulchral art.

Spring Fever.

The gradual opening of the budding trees and the shooting upvard of the blades of grass are signs of the advent of spring. The farmer is already at work stimulating the growth of his crop by fertilizers to insure a rich harvest. Nature needs stimulation and why should not man? The system needs building up after the attacks of grippe and cold, and the only tonic is pure whiskey. Max Klein, of Allegheny, Pa., has the endorsement of eminent physicians, certifying to the purity of his famous Silver Age and Duquesne Rye Whiskies. Sold everywhere at $1.50 and $1.25 per full quart. Six-year-old Penna. Rye Whiskies, absolutely pure, at $1.00 per quart or six quarts for $5.00. Send for catalogue and price list of all kinds of liquors to Max Klein, 82 Federal street, Allegheny, Pa.

The Moonshiner's Trial.

SOMERSET, Pa., June 1.—"General Siege" Miller, on trial here for the murder of old man Hochstetler in March last testified to-day in his own behalf. He insisted throughout, however, that he only acted in self-defense, and said that he was afraid to turn his back toward Hochstetler after the latter assaulted him, as he believed he had a brace of revolvers and a large knife under his coat, and that he would have used them at the first opportunity. He admitted that he himself had a repeating rifle in his hands but thought that he was unable to cope with a man of Hochstetler's strength and ferocity.

Miscellaneous Notices.

EBENSBURG MARBLE AND GRANITE Works, as sketched by a special reporter of the Johnstown Daily Herald.—Reliable dealers and fine goods.

"During a recent flying trip to Ebensburg the writer of this article visited the Marble and Granite Works of Jas. Wilkinson & Son, which were founded in 1880. The senior member of this progressive firm has had an experience of thirty-five years, and his son and partner is also a skilled worker. The class of work they produce is of the highest class and style. From four to five hands are employed and the very finest monuments in the county seat are specimens of their skill. Shipments are made through this and to adjoining counties.

"All kinds of cemetery work is executed and a fine line of Iron Railing is handled and sold. The stock of work kept on hand (received by the car-load) is very extensive and many very fine monuments are exhibited, two especially being executed in the rustic style and in imitation of brickwork, with a finely executed cross on the top. Among the many fine monuments erected by this firm is an eight ton fifteen-feet-high monument for Sheriff Griffith, monument for Father Christy (sixteen feet high), also monuments for Jacob Kibler and daughter of John Griffith. Both gentlemen give personal attention to business as well as executing the finest work. In all the time they have been in business they have adhered strictly to the maxim all goods just as represented and prices as low as the same class of work can be bought elsewhere. We have no hesitancy in recommending Messrs. Wilkinson & Son to our readers as reliable business men, progressive and trustworthy. Visit their establishment before ordering elsewhere."

I must say a great deal for Liquid Electricity. It did more for me than any one medicine I have ever taken. I took la grippe, pneumonia, catarrh, asthma, Bronchitis, etc. I bathed my lungs and throat freely with the Liquid Electricity hot, and for my cough I mixed the two medicines together, half in half, and when I felt the cough coming, I took about a tea-spoonful from the bottle day and night until I began to better. Then I did not take it so often for the catarrh. When I got able to sit up, I used the Liquid Electricity half teaspoonful in a half glass of water, a little warm, three times a day for about a month. After that I took a tea spoonful in half glass water and only used it twice a day for a while; then I used it once a day before retiring at night. Now I but seldom use any.

THE PHILOSOPHER'S STONE.

Various Descriptions Given of It by the Old-Time Alchemists.

The composition of the "philosopher's stone" was the prime problem of mediæval alchemy, says the St. Louis Republic, and, although many practitioners of the "holy art" declared that they had discovered the ingredients necessary to its production, nothing is now certainly known in regard to the composition of this "secret of secrets." By way of explanation it may be well to mention that the "philosopher's stone" was a substance which the ancient alchemists thought would change all baser metals to pure gold. Legendary history says that Noah took the true and original "philosopher's stone" with him in the ark, and that he "changed it up in the center of the great boat, and all of the living creatures gathered therein might be lighted by its presence." From the time the philosophers, alchemists, etc., began to make their celebrated experiments there was a hot controversy as to whether the "stone" had a corporal or merely an ethereal existence. One adept declared that it was composed simply of common mercury; another maintained that it was not a stone at all, but that it was of one and the same time mineral, vegetable and animal matter, "cleverly blended the three together;" a third, not to be outdone by his brother alchemists, declared that the stone was a mineral fire—continual, equal and non-evaporating. As to the color of the philosophical matter, there was the usual diversity of opinion. Floris, in "La Fourberie des Philosophes," says that it was black; to Zenon it was red; to Rosinus it was white on the surface and red inside. Others were not wanting to declare that it had "all the colors of the rainbow, besides several intermediate colors not yet named." Dr. Brewer, in his famous "Dictionary of Phrase and Fable," says: "It was, in fact, a red powder, or amalgam, to drive off the impurities of the baser metals." The doctor has the support of Morienus, who says it was red and soft to the touch; but Raymond Lalli declares that it was "harder than the diamond or sapphire."

TWO SMART DOGS.

One Visited a Physician and the Other Wanted to Be Famed.

Two dog stories have been put into circulation by the Boston Transcript. The first one is told of a very beautiful hound that once belonged to the queen, but was banished from the royal kennels because of his pugnacious disposition. An American who happened to be in London at the time ventured to buy him on the possibility that in a new country and among new surroundings he might reform.

But on the second day after his arrival he proved the futility of this hope by engaging in a life and death struggle that left him in such a pitiable plight he was at once taken by his master to see the family physician. This was due to the gleaming of a number of vials that were on hand regularly for two years.

At the end of that time the physician was awakened one night by a most piteous howling on his front piazza. Going down to investigate, he found the hound shivering on the mat. The instant that the door was opened, however, he pushed straight in, and, marching through the house, halted in the consulting room.

The amazed physician hastened to light the gas, and then the sagacious animal, slowly raising his head, showed where his neck had been brutally torn in three places.

The physician's response to this mute appeal was prompt. In a few minutes he had dressed the wounds and taken several stitches. When this was done the dog immediately returned to the door, gave one satisfied bark and calmly walked out homeward in the moonlight.

The other incident, displaying almost equal cleverness, is about a small puppy that had been sitting beside his mistress one morning while she was running herself, and incidentally came in for a share of the artificial breeze. After awhile she went away to another part of the house, and presently up he came trotting with the fan in his mouth and a most eloquent wagging of his tail, and told as plainly as possible what he wanted.

FINDING HIS BRIDE.

A Quaint Custom That Prevails in Portions of Switzerland.

The custom of throwing obstacles in the pathway of the bridegroom, as a prelude to the marriage ceremony, is of very ancient origin, says the Youth's Companion. Mythology has its tales of suitors whose courage and skill were tested before they were allowed to take their brides; in certain remote districts even in civilized lands, some form of such usages still exists. Says the author of "The Swiss Republic:"

In one part of the Canton of Ticino, a very quaint marriage ceremony prevails. The bridegroom dresses in his "Sunday best," and, accompanied by a many friends and relatives as he can muster for the fete, goes to claim his bride.

Finding the door locked, he demands admittance; the inmates ask him his business, and in reply he solicits the hand of his chosen maiden.

If his answer be deemed satisfactory, he is successively introduced to a number of matrons and maids, some perhaps deformed, and others old and ugly. Then he is presented to some large dolls, all of which he rejects with scorn, amid general merriment. The bewildered bridegroom, whose impetuosity and temper are now sorely tried, is then informed that his ladylove is absent, and invited in to see for himself.

He rushes into the house, and searches from room to room, until he finds her in her bridal dress, ready to go to church. Then are his troubles over, and his state as a benedict assured.

A Russian Institution.

The inhabitants in several districts of the province of Simbirsk lately petitioned the ministry of the interior for the abolition of corporal punishment—the bastinade, birching, etc.—in the case of any persons who have received a school education, declaring that the manner in which the castigation is administered for the slightest offense is insupportable to the dignity of persons of education. The minister of the interior replied that the question was one of general importance to the whole empire and could scarcely be raised in any one district alone. Therefore he refused to comply with the petition, adding: "The law of the 17th of July, 1893, gives uncontrolled authority to the Zemskie Natchalniki (governmental inspectors, combining police, judicial and fiscal authority in one person) to inflict corporal punishment. They will, doubtless, exercise such authority in a manner which will not appear too heavy to the persons concerned."

A Valuable Consignment.

A little oblong steel box, opening with combination lock, passed through the Chicago custom house the other morning consigned to an Illinois watch company. This insignificant affair contained diamonds and rubies by the hundreds, that were intended for settings for watches. The value of the stones was placed at one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and the duty on them was a small fortune. The goods were delivered by a special messenger.

"CAN I ASSIST YOU, MADAM?"

This is an every-day occurrence; she is taken with that "all-gone" or faint feeling, while calling or shopping. The cause of this feeling is some derangement, weakness, or irregularity incident to her sex. It matters little from what cause it may arise; instant relief may always be found by using

FACTS ABOUT SNAKES.

But Few of Them Are Poisonous and Those Can Be Distinguished.

All snakes are naturally vicious, but they are not all poisonous, says the Detroit Free Press. None of the larger varieties are poisonous, and you can always tell a poisonous snake by the formation of his head, which is shaped round. Back of the eyes there is a high bump rising from inside the head. The harmless snake has a long head, and it kills by crushing, while a poisonous snake darts at you. The anacondas hardly ever bite, and in Brazil it is quite common for a boa-holder to keep a few of them around his residence for the purpose of killing the rats, which are a great pest in that part of the world.

Among the poisonous snakes there is the variety known as the coral, which is found in Venezuela. Anyone bitten by a coral snake dies in the most horrible agony, his blood bursting or oozing out through the pores of the skin. Any snake that measures over seven or eight feet is not poisonous; in fact, I do not know any that grow over six feet long. The rattlesnake is the largest poisonous snake we have in this country. Then there are the deaf adder, the black water snake, the moccasin. These are about the only poisonous snakes we have in the United States.

The men who call themselves "snake charmers" do not handle poisonous snakes. If they have a rattlesnake they extract his fangs, and in that way render him perfectly harmless. This operation is easily performed by means of a silk handkerchief, which is waved in front of the snake, who snaps at it viciously, when the handkerchief is suddenly pulled away, bringing the fangs with it. Or you can cut the artery that feeds the poison bag and thus destroy the source of supply. This is a rather difficult operation, however, although I have often had occasion to perform it on rattlesnakes. Something, generally a piece of cork, is put in the snake's mouth to keep it open; the teeth of the reptile become imbedded in the cork, and you have a chance to cut the artery. Taking the teeth out of a rattlesnake is like pulling feathers out of a bird; they will form again.

ROUGH ON THE TENANTS.

This Exacting Landlord Had Queer Ideas of His Own.

The owner some dozen years ago of a rather dilapidated dwelling in the Rue Neuve des Mathurins—a fussy little man—being informed that an applicant for his vacant third floor had presented himself, says Temple Bar, desired him to be shown up, in order that he might treat with him in person.

"Monsieur," said he, when the terms had been discussed and agreed to, "there are two conditions on which I insist as a sine qua non."

"Indeed! Pray, what are they?"

"You shall hear. First, it is expressly stipulated in my house that the grand staircase shall be exclusively reserved for distinguished visitors. Common people, such as artists and literary men, can only be admitted by the back stairs."

"By all means," assented the applicant. "I am a literary man myself, but that doesn't in the least signify. What is the second condition?"

"That my lodgers, either on going out or coming in, make a point of occasionally stopping for a little chat with my concierge, who is a sort of connection of mine, and not absolutely illiterate, I assure you. It flatters the poor fellow."

"So I should imagine," dryly replied the other, making an effort to preserve his gravity, "we all have our little weaknesses and no one more than myself. Tenez, whenever I come across an idiot who wastes my time with intolerable absurdities I feel an irresistible impulse—exactly as I have at this moment—to open the window and pitch him out!"

Before the astonished proprietor had recovered from his stupor his visitor had disappeared, and, for all I know to the contrary, the third floor in the Rue Neuve des Mathurins may have remained unlet to the present day.

A WIFE FOR NOTHING.

The African Thought a Price Was Put on All Women.

In some parts of Africa a young man is not considered grown up until he marries, and naturally a bachelor has a pretty hard lot, says the Youth's Companion. Doctor Pruen says that one day, in a strange village, a little chit of a boy marched up to him, stuck his arms out, put his hands into what would have been his pockets, had he worn clothes, and butting his head on one side, looked up at the white man and said, in an impudent voice: "Are you married?"

On another occasion my wife and I had been visiting a chief of a small village, and as we were going away, we heard the steps of people running after us. So we waited a moment and up came two young men quite out of breath. As soon as he could get his breath, one of them said, pointing to my wife:

"How many cows could I get one like that for?"

I tried to explain to him that in England people did not get their wives in that way.

"For nothing!" he exclaimed, delighted, "could I get one like that for nothing?"

I told him in answer to one of his questions that if he came to England he would be allowed to ask a woman to be his wife, but that I thought she would probably say: "No." His friend, upon this, looked at him, and bursting into a hearty fit of laughter said, with emphasis:

"Yes, I expect she would say no."

HYPNOTIZED BY A SNAKE.

The Remarkable Adventure of a Pennsylvania Man.

A remarkable snake story was told by a resident of Clarion county recently, says the Oil City Derrick, and but for the unimpeachable character of the narrator would sound like a "snake story." He stated that a farmer who lived near Clarion while in a field was attacked by a snake fully ten feet in length. The reptile coiled itself around the farmer's waist and glared fixedly in his face, evidently trying to charm him. Shaking off the dizzy feeling caused by the snake's hypnotic gaze, the farmer cut it to pieces with the scythe and then, exhausted with fright and overexertion, sank to the ground.

The head of the snake, with a portion of the body, lay near him and the peculiar color caused him to pick it up, and he found it was an albino blacksnake. The peculiar formation of the snake's eyes caused him to examine them closely and he could hardly believe the evidence of his senses when he discovered a perfect reproduction of his face photographed in the center of the eye. He brought the snake back to town, where it was photographed and preserved in alcohol. The negative taken by the photographer shows the snake's eye perfectly with the farmer's face showing as clearly as if also taken with a camera.

Snow Maggots.

On the icy peaks of the Himalayas, says an imaginative writer, there is a "snow maggot," resembling the silk worm in appearance, and weighing nearly a pound. It is excellent to eat, but too much of it will make one bleed at the nose.

OSTRICH FARMING.

The Immense Trade in Plumes in South Africa.

Ostrich farming is one of the important industries in South Africa, which, as yet, is little, the bulk of the ostrich plumes for the market of the world. There are probably two hundred thousand domesticated ostriches in the Colony, says the American, of which number fifty dollars per ostrich is the undoubtedly an underestimate. They are usually built of stone, but ostrich-proof wire fences have been employed with equal success.

The birds are examined every eight months, yielding one pound of feathers each, but many farmers only pluck their feathers at a time, so as not to cause too much irritation and resulting inflammation, which is very injurious to the health of the birds and lessens the commercial worth of the feathers. The birds, in these farms, have plenty of food, rarely having to be fed with mealies, beans, lucerne or other cultivated food products.

The number of eggs laid varies from eighteen to twenty-four, the male bird usually guarding the nest in some sandy spot, but both birds assisting in the incubation, taking turns about. But it is during this period of incubation that the plumes are at their best, and many of them are utterly spoiled for commercial purposes. Of late years artificial incubation has been resorted to and with perfect success, for it has been found that fewer eggs are spoiled by this method, and that the young ones hatched are no less vigorous than those brought up by the birds themselves. The value of feathers exported from Cape Colony during the past twenty years is estimated at over fifty million dollars, or £10,000 sterling being about twelve hundred

JUDGE AND GUARD.

The Railroader Threatens to Subpœna Counsel Court Won't Allow.

There is a capital story being told of a lawsuit in a certain judge's court in Ten-Bibs. He lives on the Great Western line, and, each year, when he entered a train at Pudingford, would start right through to his destination without stopping. This means that the worthy judge would by-and-by find his own station about twenty miles down. He did not wake up to this fact until the familiar scenery near his office told him where he was and the rate the train was going how he was. Then the Quick as lightning he pulled one of the alarm bells, and the train drew up at the station. The guard rushed to the carriage.

"Who pulled the alarm?" cried the guard. "I did," replied the judge. "What for?" "Because I wanted to get off." The guard thereupon made some remarks to the judge more forcible and less respectful than he was accustomed to hear. His lordship thereupon complained to the station master, who told him that he would inquire into the matter when next they met at the lodge, asked the station master if he had reported the guard for his insolence. "I spoke to him, my lord, when he came through on the slow train," he replied. "Well, what he say?" "Well, my lord, he said he would come up some day and adjourn your court." The judge appreciated the man's witty way of saying that he had the right to control his own train, and did not pursue the matter further.

The Chickens of Guinea.

As a specimen of what selection will do, it may be observed that roosters and hens among the Rucuyenne tribe of Indians in the western part of French Guinea are perfectly white. Not a colored feather can be found among them. The natives have no tradition of a time when their ancestors had fowls of other colors, but the white chickens are probably explained by the fact that white feathers are the choicest ornaments among this people, and they will not wear feathers of any other color. In fact, their fowls are raised more for their feathers than for the cooking pot. It is supposed that a long time ago, when their ancestors chose white as their favorite color, they gave the preference to those fowls which were nearest white, reserving the others for the cooking pot, and by constantly breeding from fowls that were white or nearly so the present breed of chickens was evolved.

Paper in the United States.

In 1890 the only states that produced more than a million pounds of paper daily were New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio, but in 1891 two more states, Maine and Wisconsin, were added to the list. The daily product in New York in 1891 was 2,250,250 pounds, a gain of 319,100 pounds over the previous year. Massachusetts produced 1,582,100 pounds, a gain of 144,700 pounds over 1890; Pennsylvania produced 1,297,500 pounds, an increase of 58,000 pounds, while Ohio's production was 1,247,000 pounds, a gain of 54,000 pounds. In Wisconsin the daily product rose from 941,000 pounds in 1890 to 1,182,000 pounds in 1891, while Maine's output increased from 859,000 pounds in 1890 to 1,136,500 pounds in 1891. The total output of all the pulp, fiber and paper mills of the United States in 1891 was 2,382,937 tons, an increase of 12¼ per cent. since 1890, and of 186 per cent. since 1881.

'TWAS NOT A BIBLE.

Some Practical Joker Plays a Prank on the Police Justice.

Everybody who has seen a police court Bible knows what a grimy, greasy, and generally unprepossessing volume it is. Held by every variety of dirty hands, kissed frequently by not over-clean lips and left during off hours in dusty corners, it soon becomes, as far as appearance goes, a vagrant among books, and one that people with instincts of cleanliness would not dare to handle for any length of time.

The Bible in one of the uptown police courts having received such rough usage during its long service that it threatened to fall apart, one of the officers tied it together with a piece of twine, and in this shape it has been doing duty ever since. This battered veteran was the cause of a brief sensation in court the other day, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. As the witness in an assault and battery case was handed the book to swear in his evidence the string broke and the interior parted company with the covers.

The witness picked up the former and looked through its pages with a smile. "Is it this ye want me to swear on, yer honor?" he queried.

"That is the Bible, sir."

"Be th' powers, it's a dictionary!"

And so it was.

Somebody had replaced the original book with a small copy of Webster's unabridged, and for some indefinite period of time plaintiffs, defendants and witnesses had been gravely swearing upon it.

Latitudes Change.

A few years ago it was suspected that the latitude of places on the earth's surface changes. A number of astronomers agreed to make observations for two years, and the result has just been made public. Latitudes do change. Berlin, for example, was fifty feet nearer the north pole in September than it was in March. This change is not, of course, a shifting of any one point on the earth's surface. It is a tilting of the axis of the earth.

DOCTORING IN MAINE.

The Difficulties a Doctor Found in Getting to a Patient.

One day lately a Doctor received a telegram summoning him to Greenville, says the Lewiston Journal. In half an hour he was aboard a train, and at nine the evening stopped upon the platform in Greenville Junction. To be sure, many people get off at the Junction. "I'd like to go to Lead Ore," said a traveler. "Well, you'll have to take a sleigh," was the reply. "The railroad is not completed yet." The doctor, to his surprise, found that the train actually did stop at Lead Ore. He got out.

The doctor, to his surprise, found that the train actually did stop at Lead Ore. He got out. At every curve the engineer blew his whistle, and the pair started on a journey up the lake. The whistle belonging to a mogul had the yellow beams of its lantern to guide them. Every now and then, about the middle of the afternoon, the doctor's companion would jerk a thumb in the direction of some invisible habitation, and in an incredibly short time the train would stop in the snow field, by the edge of which the engineer, by the light of his lantern, would pick out a path for the doctor to follow. Then, too, the doctor, who had regularly prepared by means that the guide required, for the only two days he had been drowned in the lake, in broad daylight, in a snow bank.

When the doctor had been safely stowed on the train, merely opposite the mouth of a path, he found himself in a snow field, with the engineer, by the light of his lantern, would pick out a path for the doctor to follow. Then, too, the doctor, who had regularly prepared by means that the guide required, for the only two days he had been drowned in the lake, in broad daylight, in a snow bank.
